

Are we going to find intentions in the brain?

The talk will begin with discussing how brain events and conscious events might be related. It will then strive to demonstrate that patients with functional neurological disorders are a valuable group with whom to study this relation and better understand volition. The talk will contain some material from the two attached these papers.